

Course	Course Name	Seminar
	Course Code	DK184701
	Credit	3
	Semester	6

Description of Course
A seminar is a required course that focuses on developing a research proposal for the final project. This course is worth 3 credits. Students carry out the lecture model on their own, with the assistance of a preset lecturer. The evaluation involves a look at how the research proposal writing and seminar sessions have progressed. A team of seminar lecturers made up of members from three PWK laboratories oversees the seminar's processes and circumstances.
Learning Outcomes
Professional Attitude	Able to demonstrate the professional skills necessary to be effective and succeed in the modern workforce including work well in multi-disciplinary teams, the ability to create job opportunities the ability to formulate and solve problems, and the ability to communicate effectively, and to uphold standards of planning ethics and professionalism
Specific Skills	Able to produce creative, innovative, sustainable planning that are accommodating public interest in which the resulted plans are reviewed on the rules and theories of planning and communicating them visually, verbally and in writing so that can be accounted academically
Course Learning Outcomes
Knowledge	Mastering the techniques and processes of urban and regional planning in the aspects of urban studies, regional studies, spatial science, data science & computer application, socip-politics, environment management, urban design, infrastructure system, coastal studies, management, and economics
Basic Skills	Students able to compose preliminary chapter in seminar proposal
	Students able to synthesize research literatures
	Students able to determine the proper research methods compatible to the purpose of the research
Advanced Skills	Able to apply logical, critical, systematical, and innovative cognition in the context of development or implementations in the aspects of urban studies, regional studies, spatial science, data science & computer application, socio-politic, environmental mangement, uban design, infrastructure system, coastal studies, management economics through the formulation of seminar proposal

Attitude	Showing the sense of responsibility on the assignment in their field independently
Module Learning Outcomes
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Able to construct empirical facts 2. Able to construct issue formulation 3. Able to formulate research purpose and targets 4. Able to formulate the scope of research 5. Able to compose literature review, literature study, and the synthesis of literature 6. Able to formulate the approach and the category of research 7. Able to formulate the variables within the research and their operational definitions 8. Able to formulate sampling methods, data-collecting ethods, and analysis methods Students understand the city management conception and recognize cases of urban management
Module
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Composing preliminary of seminar proposal 2. Formulation of literature review, literature study, and the synthesis of literature 3. Formulation of research methods 4. Formulation of the general description within the area of research 5. Seminar proposal discussion 	